

BASE BALL.

Copper Queen Store Puts the Rail-roaders Out of the Game—Score
20 to 4.

There is a stillness that you can almost touch which pervades the A. & S. E. freight office. We shoved in there for a while Saturday morning, but found it too oppressive. The only man that seemed to be alive and enjoying the bright sunshine was Brown, and he did not play in Friday's ball game. We took one look at Stiles and bolted. His face had the same expression Napoleon wore on his retreat from Moscow. A man named Adams, I think he has charge of the hardware department in the store, he looked something like Stiles also. But 'nuff said. Dugan came through the ordeal smiling—and by the way Dugan, Martinez and Rupert made the best showing in behalf of the railroaders.

The reporter for the REVIEW walked to the ball game. Passes were not good on the excursion. As a consequence we did not reach the grounds until the last of the sixth inning. We met a boy coming this way who had backed the railroad boys. He was on his way up town to organize a school boys nine, who intend to challenge the A. & S. E. for next Sunday.

It was a pleasant outing for the crowd and the game was quiet and orderly, and a gentlemanly lot of fellows, all of them.

The store boys won. Score 20 to 4. It was evident from the start that the store boys out-classed the railroaders. They all played good ball. Lillis, Tehaney, Siler and Williams all played their positions like old professionals. Following is the score:

To the Public at Large.

Not wishing the public to be deceived by the recent card of thanks published by Mrs. Shipley of this place, I take this method of correcting her. I borrowed $100 from Mr. J. B. Angius and I gave her $25 myself, which she paid back and the public paid back the $100 that I borrowed for her use, and she well knew where the money came from, as I informed her the night of Sept. 24, 1900, the night before she left for Galveston, Texas.
11-2-23 Mrs. J. Allan.

Owing to failing health Mr. Robert Williams has disposed of the Montezuma hotel at Nogales to Mr. Louis J. F. Jaeger, of Yuma, and Tuesday evening the transfer was made, Mr. Jaeger taking possession at midnight of that day.

Captain Jack Crawford.

Monday evening in Library hall a Bisbee audience was entertained by Captain Jack Crawford as it never was entertained by any lecturer before. This brave old scout got down off the platform and talked to his audience heart to heart, and never for a moment during the course of his remarks did the audience show any signs of impatience. Along with his other good qualities, he is a good impersonator, and goes so rapidly from the sublime to the ridiculous that his audience is kept always on the eve of expectancy. Interwoven with his "own little poems," as he calls them, comes a good temperance lecture, a good word for the gospel and plenty of good things to keep the audience in a good humor. Jack Crawford is one of those old frontiersmen who simply did his duty for the government in the early days, saw lots of hardships, but does not go around the country posing as a martyr. He has traveled over almost the entire civilized world, but with all his traveling and association with the "big ones" in the east he comes back to the west each time glad to see his old pals who knew him on the western trails twenty-five years ago, and in the audience Monday night were several of these old friends.

Captain Jack says some of those uncultivated easterners do things that would not be tolerated in the west. "Jack" attended grand opera in New York city with his friend Congressman Amos Cummings. He looked up at the finely and scantily dressed ladies in the boxes and it nearly stampeded him. He had never seen any women, but Apaches dress like that before.

His story of Pony Bill, the cow boy preacher, and his own pledge to his mother never to touch intoxicating liquors, were extremely touching.

"Captain Jack" left Tuesday morning for Tucson. If he should ever return to Bisbee he would be guaranteed a crowded house.

One On Uncle Billy.

Uncle Billy Plaister, like most people who have arrived at a mature age, has a hobby on which he is more or less "touchy." Uncle Billy's pot hobby is Texas, which he considers about the best place on earth, and hopes that when he dies his soul may be assigned to the precincts of the storied Alamo.

Some months ago Uncle Billy was foreman of the grand jury at Tombstone when the case of a young man who had robbed the lodging house of Mary Tack of a number of blankets came before the inquisitorial body. Mary was a witness before the jury, and after answering several questions volunteered the statement that she did not wish to prosecute the boy, as "he was from Texas and could not help stealing." This was a stunner for Uncle Billy, and if Mary had known it a critical moment for her. After Uncle Billy had recovered from his astonishment at the, to him, almost blasphemous sentiment he roared out, "Turn the son of a gun loose."

William Short and Mr. Meade came to town Wednesday from their cattle ranch in Sonora. Mr. Short reports that the copper mine he is developing as showing up finely, and says he will commence shipping ore as soon as the new railroad, which will pass near the property, is open for business.

The French capitalists who have been in Mexico for the past two weeks looking at mining property, mention of which was made two weeks ago, returned this week to Bisbee, having bonded several claims.
